

Track B: Clinical Science

Jennifer Hoy, Australia

Jennifer Hoy is an infectious diseases physician from The Alfred Hospital, Melbourne, Australia. She has been involved in HIV patient care and research since the mid-1980s and is the inaugural Professor Director of HIV Medicine at Alfred Health and Monash University. Her current research interests include the co-morbidities associated with aging and HIV, particularly bone disease and cardiovascular disease, and the impact of residual immune activation and chronic inflammation. Her other passion is ensuring the quality of care provided to PLHIV and quality of life experienced by PLHIV.